If It's Monday, This Must Be Murder!

Pat Cook

If It's Monday, This Must Be Murder! is a comedy/mystery play written by Pat Cook. The play is set in the 1940s and follows the character of Detective Harry Monday, a former police detective who now works as a private investigator. The play is known for its throwback to the 1940s style and its humorous take on the mystery genre.

The play follows Harry Monday as he investigates a series of murders that seem to be connected to a murder mystery writer named Agatha Christie. The play is filled with humor and delivers a series of surprises as Harry Monday solves the mystery.

If It's Monday, This Must Be Murder! is one of Pat Cook's plays and has been produced by several theaters across the United States. The play is a favorite of theater audiences and is considered a classic of the mystery genre.