Rome's Eastern Trade: International Commerce and Imperial Policy, 31 BC-AD 305

Gary K Young

Rome's Eastern Trade: International Commerce and Imperial Policy, 31 BC-AD 305 was written by Gary K. Young and published by Routledge in 2001. The book examines the role of international commerce and imperial policy in the Roman Empire, focusing on the period from 31 BC to AD 305. It looks closely at the influence of the commerce in eastern goods both in trade and politics.

The book covers various aspects of the Roman Empire's interactions with the East, including the economic and political interests of the imperial government, the role of commercial networks, and the impact of foreign trade on the Empire's development. Young's work provides a comprehensive analysis of the Roman Empire's engagement with the East, offering insights into the economic and political strategies that shaped the Empire's interactions with Eastern territories.

Rome's Eastern Trade: International Commerce and Imperial Policy, 31 BC-AD 305 is a valuable resource for scholars and students interested in the history of international commerce and imperial policy during the Roman Empire's era. The book offers a detailed exploration of the complex relationships between the Empire and its eastern partners, highlighting the importance of trade and commerce in shaping the Empire's political landscape.